A FEMINE IDEA.

Two New York Sisters Start a Novel

and Successful Book Shop.

Two young New York women who were decidedly "cultured" persons found themselves about two years ago minus the means of living as they had been accustomed to. They had been people of easy means, occupying a pre-etty house on Madison avenue filled with pictures, books and musical instruments. Every year or two they went to Europe for six months' travel. When at home they amused themselves with lectures, concerts, classes for all sorts of study and literary society. They loosely appreciated and sympathized with every thing admirable in all the arts, but they never attempted to do any thing themselves. They were not bores, and had passed out of girlhood. Suddenly their father died, and it was discovered that his property was so entangled there was not more than about $5,000 apiece for each of the daughters. Of course starvation did not stare them in the face, but $5,000, even when most judiciously invested, does not yield a very liberal income, and the two sisters sat down to think what they should do to increase that income.

They determined to set up a book shop. Now, of course, book shops are not new, but the sort of book shop they planned to have was very new. They rented two good-sized rooms in a centrally located place, and the greatest congregation of the offices of folks who earned their living with their pen and who were likely to be interested in books. The outer room was fitted up like the ordinary book shop, in the inner like a charming library. In this room were dull, rich-colored paper, carpets and curtains. There were great tables strewn with new books and magazines, others with all the conveniences for writing. There were chairs of undoubted comfort, some good bits of bric-a-brac about, and half a dozen clever etchings on the wall. Just the sort of a library one would like to spend one's days in.

They spent $5,000 of their $10,000 on furnishing the room and buying their stock, and then they gave a tea and invited their friends. They wore their prettiest gowns, lighted candles, and had some roses about, and had a charming little tea table set out with china and silver near the fire. People came partly from friendship and partly from curiosity, and who the new author was at all about him or her,

and there were tickets to be had there for all the concerts and lectures and theaters, the day's papers and the best books. People got into the habit of making appointments to meet there, and any afternoon one was sure to drop in upon a dozen or more people one wished to see. It grew to be a sort of informal club for all the book people.

For two years it was a joy and a delight to every one, but last autumn a perverse old uncle up in Maine died and left the two women a fortune, and

"So you and Herbert are going to be married?" said one young woman to another. "Yes, pretty soon."

"You didn't threaten him with a breach of promise suit, did you?"

"No. I merely showed him the photograph that I always keep concealed under the sofa."—Merchant Traveler.

"Mamma," said Johnnie, still smarting from a shingle application,

"is the roof of any thing on top of it?" "Of course it is," she said, shortly. "And don't shingles always go on the roof?" "Certainly they do."

Then Johnnie was silent for quite a while. Finally he said, in a quavering voice: "Mamma, ain't my roof upside down?"—Washington Critic.

"Do you think," said Mrs. Killin, of San Francisco, "that my daughter is sufficiently intelligent to enter your seminary?" "I am sorry to say, madam," replied the Boston teacher, "that your daughter doesn't even know the difference between a common and a proper noun." "She don't! Well, have her taught straight off! I don't want any thing common about her.

She must use only proper nouns in her speech."—Time.

LAST OF HIS RACE.

A good story is told of a pur-

ACTS ABOUT AMBER.

The Substance Is Gathered by the Fishermen on the Baltic.

In the window of one of the largest tobacco stores in Brooklyn there is displayed a remarkably fine collection of amber. Some of it, as translucent as honey, fairly glows with color, as though it had caught the sunshine of a thousand summers. This has been polished, and differs as greatly from the rough, dirty-looking lumps beside it as does a cut from an uncut diamond, and yet the latter is just as full of color, only it is imprisoned.

"Where is amber obtained?" asked a reporter, who had been attracted by the display, of the proprietor of the store.

"The bulk of the amber supply of the world," was the reply, "comes now from the region known as Samland, on the east Prussian coast of the Baltic.

I happen to know something about it, because I came from that part of the world myself, although not from that precise vicinity. From the Brusterot light-house on the Baltic coast one can see with the naked eye the entire stretch of shore on which this precious petrification is and has been found for the past three thousand years. The stratum of blue earth on which the described fragments of amber are found lies from twenty to thirty feet below the surface of the beach. To some extent the amber may be and is obtained by mining, but frequently the vein is exposed by the action of the water, so that fishing for amber is much easier than digging, and most of it is obtained in that way.

"Amber fishermen are a vigorous and hardy people, and they need to be to carry on their business. They work in stormy weather, when the huge waves have detached masses of amber from the ocean bed and are rolling it, mixed up with bunches of seaweed, in the surf. The fishermen, half naked, wade into the sea, shoulder deep, armed with long hook forks and hand nets. The women stand along the shore as near as they can to the waves. The men poke up the masses of seaweed with their forks and drag them in toward the shore as far as possible. With their nets they endeavor to secure the pieces of amber that may be floating in the water. As fast as the seaweed is got to the shore the women take it and pick out the bits of amber that may be clinging to it and place them in bags ready for the dealer.

Some dealers stay on the beach while the fishing is going on, thus hoping to secure particularly fine specimens."

"It must be a pretty interesting sight."

"Not only interesting but exciting.

The whole scene is wild in the extreme. The thundering roar of the surf, the shouts of the men and the shrill screams of the women mingle wildly with the sighing of the wind.

The most profitable part of the harvest, however, is gathered after the storm is over. The amber which

CREAM OF NEWS.

Clarksville's Celebration.

Cumberland Lodge, K. of P., Clarksville, celebrated its fifteenth anniversary Tuesday and upon invitation 32 members of Evergreen Lodge went over to participate in the exercises. They were entertained during their stay at the Arlington Hotel. After dinner an excursion was taken to Dunbar's Cave and at 8 o'clock a meeting was held and the Knight's rank conferred. After the lodge adjourned a banquet followed, which was presided over by the ladies of Clarksville. Knight G. M. Bell made a speech of thanks on behalf of the visitors, which was responded to by Knight Joel B. Fort, of Springfield. Following the supper there was an elegant ball, which wound up the festivities. This was largely attended by the beauty and chivalry of our sister city and was a fitting finale to a successful affair throughout. The Clarksville Knights never do things by halves and in this instance they treated their guests with royal hospitality and furnished them with an entertainment that will not soon be forgotten.

The Hopkinsville Knights in attendance were H. H. Abernathy, D. L. Johnson, J. P. Campbell, Gid Gooch, Bailey Waller, J. B. Jackson, W. C. Wright, J. H. Boyd, Geo. Breathitt, Robt. Johnson, M. L. Eib, John Moayan, O. S. Stevens, D. M. Canler, R. F. West, O. A. Wynne, J. H. Myers, C. E. Kennedy, Geo. M. Steele, O. G. Lander, N. A. Barnett, A. H. Clark, Jas. Breathitt, W. M. West, J. T. Hanbury, W. L. Waller and G. M. Bell.

Split His Head.

Tom Bellamy, col., a brakeman on the C. O. & S. W. Railroad, was knocked senseless Wednesday near Beaver Dam, by a piece of timber that fell from the train while in rapid motion. One end of the timber struck the ground causing a rebound the other end falling back on the car and striking the brakeman, splitting his head open in a horrible manner. His injuries may prove fatal.

Another Fire at Princeton.

On Tuesday night another incendiary fire broke out at Princeton. This time it was in the stores of W. M. Rawls, boots and shoes, and Chas. Smith, groceries, both of which were entirely destroyed. The losses were not learned, but the property was well insured. This is the third fire of this character within the last few months.

Important to Teachers.

There will be an examination of applicants for teachers' certificates in the Hopkinsville Public Schools held at the Public School building on Friday and Saturday, June 7th and 8th, 1889, beginning at 8 o'clock, a. m., each day. All who desire an examination for a certificate should be there promptly.

Walking on the Track.

Dick Poseley, col., was hurt on the railroad Wednesday night, south of town. He claims to have been knocked off while walking on the track. He sustained a scalp wound, a bruised hip and other slight injuries.

Opening Ball at Cerulean.

The opening ball will be given at Cerulean Springs on Thursday night next, May 23rd. An excellent band will make music and a grand time is promised those who attend.

Burned to Death.

A child of Frank Brown, col., at Crofton was burned to death Tuesday. For particulars see Crofton letter elsewhere.

Round Tickets.

The L. & N. has again resumed the practice of selling round trip tickets, discontinued several years ago.

Max Mendel's store was closed Tuesday by John Moayan who attached his stock for debt.

The Y. W. C. T. U. ladies had a strawberry supper Tuesday night and cleared about $25.

The Uniontown Spring races will be held May 23, 24, and 25, at the Union county fair grounds.

Rev. J. W. Bigham will preach at Vaughan's chapel Sunday morning and at Goshen in the evening.

The Misses Mercer entertained a party of young people at their hospitable home on North Main last evening.

The event of the week will be Dr. Wharton's lecture this evening. Those who fail to hear it will miss a treat.

Only 25 cts.

Mrs. J. M. Hester and family are occupying Mr. J. K. Gant's residence during the absence of Mr. Gant's family in Europe.

Rev. H. F. Perry will not fill his appointment at Bennettsville next Sunday, but will preach there the fourth Sunday in this month.

Alex Goodall, of Posey county, Ind., has purchased a small farm of 46 acres near this city, and will move to it in the fall. Price paid $1,400.

The M. E. church and C. P. church will hold a union service at Goshen church next Sunday. Dinner on the ground. Rev. J. E. Scobey will fill Eld. A. C. Biddle's pulpit in this city.

Rev. J. N. Prestridge will preach the Annual Sermon before Bethel Female College on Sunday evening May 20. He performed the same duty five years ago. Mr. Prestridge was the choice of the young ladies.

The balloon sent up Saturday night last from the Indian Camp was found early Sunday morning on the farm of Esq. J. J. Jackson, sixteen miles east of the city in Todd county.

Two paper hangers and cleaners named Philippi and Carson, who have been in the city for two or three weeks, left on the 5 o'clock train yesterday morning, leaving their board bill unpaid.

Ladies wanting the latest novelties in Spring Millinery should by all means call on Mrs. Carrie Hart. The very last just in and lower prices than ever. Those new white hats "are just too lovely."

There will be a basket meeting at Concord church, near Julien, Sunday, the occasion being the re-union of old members. There will be services in the morning and afternoon and a large crowd is expected to be present.

The Universalists will begin a protracted meeting Sunday. After Monday night the pastor will be assisted by Rev. Mrs. Sophia Gibbs, of Decatur, Ill., who will preach every night during the week. On Sunday the 26th the church will be formally dedicated.

Mrs. Carrie Hart always keeps up with the seasons, and has just received her summer millinery, conspicuous among which are those beautiful white hats. Besides being beautiful and the latest in style, they are wonderfully cheap.

Dr. J. W. Crenshaw, of Cadiz, assisted by Dr. Rascoe, of Caledonia, successfully removed an eye of Robert Dillard, col., near Julien, one day last week. The eye was injured two years ago, inflammation setting up recently causing stiffness. He is doing well and will soon be out.

Mr. S. H. Turner is now taking contracts for the next telephone year. The rates are as heretofore, $19 for business houses and $31 for residences, with a slight increase if paid quarterly. Mr. Turner has made a success of the exchange and we hope to see him increase his list largely another year.

The Circuit court at Elkton, Ky., is playing havoc with the violators of the prohibition law in Todd county. Joe Linebaugh, of Guthrie, up to yesterday, had been fined $2,675 and is now in jail. Many other precincts are yet to hear from the majorities ranging from $400 up.—Clarksville Progress.

Rogers & Davis, the Ninth street liverymen, have just had completed for their use one of the costliest hacks ever used in this city. It is a beauty and cannot be excelled for comfort. They will at all times furnish experienced hackmen and the traveling public can now be supplied by them with first-class turnouts in every particular and at ordinary figures.

Children's Day will be duly observed at the Methodist church next Sunday at 10:30 a. m., with a programme of exercises in every way befitting the occasion. Speeches and recitations will be interspersed with music and cheering, songful melodies. "Yers," by request, has written a poem on "Smiles," to be read on that occasion. Everybody invited.

Solomon Temple, No. 27, the Good Samaritan Lodge, is a prosperous and flourishing order. They met Tuesday night, (its regular meeting night) and after initiating 8 candidates, elected the officers for the ensuing quarter. Delegates were also elected to the State Grand Lodge, which will meet at Covington June 5. Rev. Jas. L. Allensworth and James Thomas being chosen. Rev. Jas. L. Allensworth was elected at Bardonia last session as State Grand Orator, and will deliver an oration at Covington while the council is in session.

A horse owned by Jesse Evans, a renter on Miss Lizzie Bell's farm, near Bell, Ky., ran into a barbed wire fence last week and was badly cut. We understand that Mrs. Evans and another lady saved the animal's life by prompt action. An artery in the horse's neck was severed, and they pressed the ends between their thumbs and staunch the flow of blood until a physician came and stitched the ends together.—Tobacco Leaf.

Jones & Banks, the progressive barbers on Seventh street, have recently added to their outfit other appropriate furniture and have had their floors nicely carpeted, which, lends additional charms to their popular shaving resort. They employ none but expert barbers and their patrons all go away pleased with their work. Remember their place of business, Seventh street, two doors east of the Bank of Hopkinsville.

Every lady and gentleman of this city who has a taste for letters, a love of valuable information, or a desire to hear one of the foremost orators of the age, will undergo trials and difficulties to attend the lecture of Rev. Dr. Robert A. Young, at the Methodist church, on the 23rd inst., in which he tells in the most fascinating and picturesque style, of the sights he saw and the wonders he heard, while abroad two years ago.

Mrs. John L. Brasher received a telegram yesterday stating that her brother Mr. Rice had been injured accidentally Wednesday and died the next day. Mr. Rice lived at Ricedale, Muhlenberg county.

Tourists.

Whether on pleasure bent or business, should take on every trip a bottle of Syrup of Figs, as it acts most pleasantly and effectively on the kidneys, liver and bowels; preventing fevers, headaches, and other forms of sickness. For sale in 50 cents and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists.

Southern Baptist Convention.

The distinguished body of Baptists, representing the Southern States, has just held a crowded session at Memphis. Judge Jonathan A. Haralson, of Selma, Alabama, was elected President and proved himself a worthy successor of Dr. Mell and Boyce.

The kind Word Series will continue to be published. The decision was reached through a committee and loudly applauded. A motion was withdrawn to invite messengers from the Northern Publication Society to meet with the Convention next year.

The encroachments of Romanism was ably discussed and severely denounced. The sermons of Broadus, Carter, Dixon and Ellis on Sunday were considered great, but it was generally considered that Dr. Parker, from England, exceeded all in pathos, point and power. He discussed the reign of grace with masterly logic and tenderness. The addresses on the various missions were exceedingly well prepared and delivered. Diaz, of Cuba, and Powell, of Mexico, thrilled their audiences. The next convention will be held in Fort Worth, Texas.

Revs. J. N. Prestridge, J. T. Barrow and Prof. J. W. Rust were in attendance and returned home Tuesday.

Dawson Springs.

These noted springs, situated in Hopkins county, on the C. O. & S. W. Railroad, are opened both Winter and Summer, but during the Summer season visitors flock to this resort as rapidly as transportation will admit. The Arcadia Company owners have an elegant hotel, the largest in the place, on their ground and the rooms are now being rapidly filled with visitors, some to spend a week others to spend the season. To say more of the virtues, properties, &c., of the waters of these celebrated springs would only be repeating what has already been said by the many who have been benefited by their use. Invalids who go there wasted and worn after a short stay return home well and happy. The scenery around Dawson is grand to behold and one has only to look on at nature's works to be convinced that the surroundings exceed in beauty the pictures formed with the brush of the most experienced artists.

Clarksville Tobacco Market.

Hancock, Hallums & Co tobacco salesmen, Gracey warehouse, Clarksville, Tennessee, sold for four weeks ending May 9, 1889, 362 Hogheads as follows:

115 hds. of good and fine leaf, 7.25 to $13.00.

589 hds. low to medium leaf, $3.25 to 6.95.

158 hds. lugs, $1.40 to 4.75.

Our market for the past four weeks has been very irregular, closing today with better bidding on all grades of good, useful tobaccos showing good order. The percentage of common, badly ordered tobaccos continues to increase, with but few friends and we expect but few in the future.

The seller does not understand why this is. It is simply because there is two years' supply of these kinds, and all nations want better tobacco; and not until our farmers can fully realize and appreciate this fact, and correct, by planting less and making it better, can we look for better times.

The over-production has placed it in a position that it has no value. We hear great complaint of bugs from some sections. If we can get half a crop this year it will be ample to supply the wants.

A new first-class Stock of Clothing to be retailed out at Manufacturers' Cost and no humbug. The cost sale chestnut has been practiced on the people of Christian county so often that it seems to me that all will doubt this as soon as they read it. But all I ask of those wishing to purchase good, reliable, honest Clothing at the prices that the largest merchants pay for them. Come to my store and I will prove to you that the prices I ask are cost and nothing else.

My object in this proceeding is to close out my stock of Clothing as soon as possible in order to use the up state of my house for other goods and will not handle Clothing at all when my present stock is sold out, so if you intend to inspect this elegant stock do so before the best time for closing out sale to sell out this stock. I will give to any one wishing it the key to my mark and they can at their own leisure look through my goods and see what I paid for them and take them home at that price. Remember the place.

AN EASTERN TALE.

A king once summoned his three sons, And thus addressed the anxious ones: "Go forth, my sons, through all the earth And search for articles of worth; Then he who brings the choicest thing, Shall in my stead be crowned as king."

In one year's time again they meet, And kneel before the sovereign's feet: The monarch knew not what to do, And as with gracious outstretched hand, He welcomed home the youthful band, He natural eagerness expressed, To see the objects of their quest. The first such lustrous pearls displayed, That every tongue in loud praise, So white, the snow-flakes on their way Compared to them are dull and gray. The next a diamond more pure, And larger than the Koh-i-noor, That shone with such a brilliant light, The sunbeams, shamed, withdrew from sight.

EARLY AMERICANS.

Simplicity in their mode of living was the marked characteristic of the early settlers of America. Everything which pertained to them was plain and unostentatious. The food which they ate was frugally served and of the substantial kind.

Their clothing was home-spun and the moccasins which covered their feet were of hides of animals and ornamented with beads after the Indian fashion.

Their homes were simplicity itself, consisting of roughly hewn logs and home made shingles—the whole constituting the old Log Cabin home of frontier life.

Yet those were model homes. The wives and mothers were well versed in the art of all that pertained to housewifery.

Conspicuous in the early home was the striking figure of the old grandmother.

Not only was she the adviser in all affairs but she was the medical adviser and prescriber for the sick. Often were her hands engaged in the preparation of some healing ointment or remedy for the relief of those in ill-health. Fully versed in all the household duties, she was the grand store-house of Nature, who wisely knew how to utilize the curative properties contained in certain roots and herbs and accordingly she transformed them into certain remedies, which have made the name of Warner's Log Cabin Remedies the most prominent brand of Log Cabin Remedies.

The suffering patient has been quick to recognize and appreciate their true value and the manufacturers are daily in receipt of much praise for the cures effected by the use of these old time remedies against sickness and disease.

To the old Log Cabin home, however, is justly due the praise for all the good which may, thereby, be effected.

Producing Diamonds by Electricity.

It would appear, from an interesting communication recently published, that the author of the article describing a number of experiments made on carbon at high temperatures and under great pressures, had produced diamonds artificially. The objects of the experiments had not this end in view, however, but were to obtain a dense form of carbon for use in arc and incandescent electric lamps; for if the "life," or duration, of the carbons of either variety of lamp could be prolonged, it would considerably economize electric lighting. Without entering into the details of the experiments, which were not entirely successful, although a very dense form of carbon was obtained, it is interesting to note that under the conditions mentioned above, and by contact with other substances, there was obtained on the surface of the carbon rod, a gray powder, harder than emery, and capable of scratching the diamond. The inference is that this powder is the diamond itself. If electricity can be made to give us these crystals of light, as well as its more transcient brilliancy, there will be no need for those who wish to purchase the genuine stones to wear imitations.—Demorest's Magazine.

Plain fitted skirts without any drapery are very fashionable, and their first cousin in style, the accordion skirt, will in all probability be more worn than any other style during the summer.—Godey's Lady's Book.

BLUNDERS ALL AROUND.

Reminiscences of the Famous Charge of the Light Brigade. The Crimean war, which broke out in 1854, afforded to Lord Lucan the greatest opportunity of his life. Then fifty-four years old, but with the vigor, courage and energy of a man of thirty. His reputation as a cavalry officer obtained for him the command of the cavalry division in the Crimea, and he took part in the battles of the Alma September 25, of Balaclava October 25, when he was slightly wounded, and of Inkerman November 5, 1854. It was at the battle of Balaclava that the charge of the Light Brigade took place—that famous charge in connection with which oceans of ink have since been shed, and which remains to this hour an inexplicable mystery, about which we know little more than that, in the poet Laureate's words, "some one had blundered." The morning of October 25, 1854, twelve thousand Russians, under General Liprandi, attacked and took a redoubt in the vicinity of Balaclava, manned by about three hundred Turks. The victorious Russians then assailed the British position, and were driven back and severely handled by the heavy cavalry under Sir James Scarlett. At this critical moment an order, supposed to have come from Lord Raglan, but which was in fact a mistake, was delivered to the latter by Captain Nolan, who added a few contemptuous words of his own when Lord Cardigan appeared to hesitate about complying with Lord Raglan's order to charge the Russian army, which had reformed on its own ground with heavy masses of artillery in its front. Unfortunately Lord Lucan and Cardigan were not on speaking terms, and instead of sending Captain Nolan back to Lord Lucan, requesting him to repeat the order under circumstances of confusion, Captain Nolan should have been instructed to explain, Lord Cardigan, too proud to communicate with his brother-in-law, proceeded to lead his Light Cavalry regiment against the serried ranks of the Russians. Then followed that splendid but useless display of valor concerning which the French commander-in-chief remarked: "C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre; et de la guerre le présent Sir George Wombell, who took part in it and was among the few survivors, is now one of the ablest living chroniclers. Captain Nolan, although a staff officer, who had no business to engage in the fray, joined in the charge of the Light Brigade, and was killed by a round shot at the head of those gallant horsemen. They went into action 670 strong, led by Lord Cardigan on his magnificent thoroughbred charger, but of them no more than 138 returned. It was one of the proudest achievements of the British cavalry, that although "Cannon to right of them, Cannon to left of them, volleys among the enemy, and the only wounder is that of Lord Cardigan's indomitable followers should have escaped death or capture. Banished from the world, they have again and again been given by their admiring fellow-countrymen to the survivors of that glorious day, and, notably, one which took place at the Alexandra Palace on the anniversary of the battle of Balaclava in 1875. The death of Captain Nolan, who had conceived the most exalted ideas of the capacity of the cavalry, removed the witness who might have thrown most light on the transactions of that memorable passage at arms, and to this hour we know little more about it than that there were blunders all round.—London Telegraph.

FEAR OF DEATH.

Unquestionably one of the most ghastly forms of Hypochondria is the fear of death. There are persons whose dread of death is so intense that they can not enjoy life. They are vainly told that it is irrational to be continually disquieted about an event common to all, and that can not be avoided. Because it is inevitable they shudder and turn pale at the thought of it. The dread of death of the great change is not confined to those who have most cause for apprehension. It is shared by many whose consciences are void of offense. Even pious men are sometimes haunted by a vague horror of the universal doom, and in some cases this error takes the form of mania, and its victims throw themselves unbidden into the arms of the specter, as if drawn to his dread embrace by an irresistible fascination.

The best method of dealing with this ghastly form of Hypochondria, is not to attack it with reason and philosophy, since the sum of all that logic can say upon the subject of hackneyed truism that what can not be prevented should be faced manfully. The promises of the Gospel, understandingly and trustfully read and applied, are the only resources for such a condition. Unnaturally fears of life before the cheering assurance of life immortal.

—Like the moon-eyed hermit of the East, chased on the night-eyed by the Star of Day. In the Book of Books, the Bible, we realize that death to the humble believer is but the commencement of a more glorious life—the complement of his earthly career—the shadow through which he must pass to reach the perfect light. There is no courage so high, so calm, so indomitable, as that which is derived from the encouraging words of the inspired volume, and the consciousness of walking, as nearly as human imperfections will permit, in conformity with its precepts.—N. Y. Ledger.

Maidenly Self-Sacrifice.

"George, dear," she said, with a pleading Amelia River look upon her face, "surely you are not going this early. Have you come to love me?" "No, darling, my love for you is as a rock; it will endure," George replied with a smile. "But early, why is it after one o'clock, and the time is so heavy in the air?" "The boss says that if the store isn't open and the steps washed down hereafter at six o'clock I lose my job."

"Go, go, George," exclaimed the girl, with noble heroism, "the job is about all we will have to claim as our own."

—N. Y. Sun.

Frederick T. Roberts, M. D., Professor in University College, London, Eng. Examiner in Medicine, Royal College of Surgeons, says in reference to Warner's Log Cabin Remedies: "Complications are met, such as consumption, heart disease, morbid condition, liver affections. Warner's Safe Cure cures these affections by putting the kidneys in a healthy condition, thereby enabling them to expel the waste or poisonous matter from the system."
